clauses of the land act, states that in the Sligo union alone 600 applications have been made, and in the western unions considerably more. Continuing, he says: "The bulk of those emigrants will go to the United States. They will receive £7 per head to cover cost of passage and outfit. It has been calculated that this will cost £6 cach, which will leave about £1 to each on arrival. As it appears to me, the guardians of the poor are desirous to emigrate those who are likely to be in a state of cheoric poverty at home, and save the rates from their possible support. If these people are thrown upon the cities of the United States without provision being made beforehand for their employment, they may become burdensome on the rates there also, and the country of their adoption may become a loser instead of a gainer by their influx."

In conclusion, Consul General Merritt says: "I have thus briefly indicated the mature of the information which these consular reports contain and the general conclusions to which they tend, which I believe to be worthy of serious consideration. * * * As to relieving Irish distress by contributions of money from the United States, which have always been so liberal, the charges have been so frequent in the past that much of this money has been used for other purposes, that I suggest in the future the utmost care be taken in choosing the channels through which the charity is to be administered."

Accompanying the above report are the subreports upon which it is based, from the United States consuls at Cork, Belfast, Dublin, Limerick, Sligo, Londonderry, and Waterford. These subreports answer with considerable fullness of detail the questions propounded by the consul general, and give many interesting particulars with regard to the present condition of the Irish peasantry.

Upon the subject of the reported distress in western and southern Ireland, Mr. John J. Piatt, at Cork, writes as follows:

"I met several days ago a prominent gentleman of this place—a very intelligent, as well as genial clauses of the land act, states that in the Slige apportunities of knowing western and south-ern Ireland for some years past should have been the best, and in the course of a brief conversation I hazarded the remark that there was a great deal of distress in the coast region of the island. 'Not a bit of it; don't you believe it,' was his quiet, emphatic an-awer; and then he told me of his experience attending the distribution of certain aupplies to the 'distressed districts' in 1850."

At points where the want was reported attending the distribution of certain aupplies to the 'distressed districts' in 1850."

At points where the want was reported greatest the officers could not, unless at extravagant prices, he said, employ help even to unload the cargons of supply, and in some cases, therefore, the naval crews had to perform the work themselves. The officers would meet, he told me, with expressions of contempt at the idea of sending the people "such stuff" as Indian corn meal, which, as I have learned from domestic experience, is considered food fit only for pigs. Again, has it ever been told that the mission of the Constellation to these shores three years ago was an enterprise of doubtful success as a charity; that the American potatoes went a-begging, so to speak, for somebody to eat them; were not thought so good as Irish potatoes (nothing American, I am afraid, is thought so good here as that which is Irish); and that some of them were returned to Queenstown and exported to the United States? Such has been a story current here, and reported has been a story current here, and reported to me by the high authority just quoted. The visit of the Constellation was, however, a boon in some respects. If it did not relieve the poor starving Irish, there were costly dinners and balls up and down the country. The the poor starving irish, there were costly dinners and balls up and down the country. The gentleman quoted above seemed to think it a pity, and expressed indignation that people of the United States, in view of the terrible Ohio valley floods, should be called upon to minister to fictifious distress in Ireland.

I have written the foregoing paragraph to suggest a doubt of the picture of Irish distress being as bed as it is painted in certain quarters, but I repeat that I feel confident there is enough dire poverty and need in the western and southern coast region to excite the sympathies and insure the helping hand of those charitably disposed everywhere.

Consul Wood, of Bellist, writes: "It may be said generally that no exceptional distress appears to exist, or is reported as existing, among the people of this district. The published accounts of the failure of the crops (of potatoes chiefly) and the consequent suffering and destitution, so far as they concern the accounts of the failure of the crops (of po-tatoes chiefly) and the consequent suffering and destitution, so far as they concern the north of Ireland, relate almost wholly to the county of Donegal and within the district of the consul at Londonderty."

Consul Barrows, of Dublin, says: "So far as my own knowledge extends, there is very little unusual destitution in the vicinity of Dublin, or in any of the counties directly

Dublin, or in any of the countles directly westward across Ireland. Reports of real distress will doubtless reach you from the northwest and southwest, but in my consular jurisdiction the people are moderately pros-

Consular Agent Tinsley, of Limerick, reports: "As far as my knowledge and experience go, I do not believe that any exceptional distress prevails among the laboring classes in this city. As regards the county of Limcrick, owing to the unusully wet winter, agricultural laborers must have felt the want of employment, as it was almost impossible to corress on outdoor work for several months but carry on outdoor work for several months, but on the whole, I have not heard of exceptional distress among them. In the western parts of the county of Clare, I have good reason to believe the published accounts of distress and destitution are not exaggerated."

destitution are not exaggerated."

Consular Agent Eccles, of Sligo, writes:
"There is no doubt that real and very great distress exists along the western and northwestern scabbard of Ireland, and in some inland districts also."

Consular Agent Farrell, of Waterford, says:
"I have received information from a reliable source as to the state of affairs in the county of Kilkenny, and any therefore in a position
of Kilkenny and any therefore in a position of Kilkenny, and am therefore in a position to state that no exceptional distress exists throughout that county. At the same time the people are emigrating every day, and there is every prospect of the number of emi-grants increasing instead of decreasing."

Hanged to a Tree.

MADISONVILLE, KY., May 8 .- A young negro employed by William B. Haywood, near Hanson, attempted to outrage the person of Mrs. Haywood last Saturday during the absence of her husband. The negro, fearing discovery, fled, but was arrested on Sunday, and while his captors were waiting for a train to bring him hither a body of masked men took him from them and hanged him to a tree. He confessed his crime.

DYE'S DISCIPLINE.

It is Not Thoroughly Approved by Those Disciplined and Some Othera.

An Ex-Confederate in Training for Pro-motion—The Major Interviewed.

"Perhaps the reason why the ex-Egyptian general who is at the head of our police de-partment is in favor of 'honorably discharging' so many of the members of the police force is because he was 'honorably discharged' himself from the United States army," said a gentleman well versed in police matters to a REPUBLICAN reporter yesterday on Fifteenth

"When did that occur?" said the reporter. "Well, you know the army was top heav; "Well, you know the army was top heavy after the war—too many officers. So to weed out those who could best be spared congress passed an act July 15, 1870, allowing some to resign, others to apply for a discharge, and others to ge before the Hancock board for examination. Mr. Dye, who was a major in the 4th infantry at that time, and had been a colonel of volunteers by brevet, applied for his discharge under provisions of the third section of general orders, issued by the Wardenartment July 2, 1870, and was 'honorably discharged' Sept. 30, 1870, with one year's pay."

"Did the 'honorably discharged 'policemen got any pay?"

"The commissioners gave one man $100 and The commissioners gave one man $100 and two others $50 each out of the policemen's fund and did not give the others anything. All of them are in want, with big families on their hands, and it strikes me that if one was entitled to any part of that fund, all of them

"Did a board sit upon the honorably dis were."

"Did a board sit upon the honorably discharged policemen?"

"Yes. Dr. McKim, Capt. Vernon and Lieut Gessford made up each man's record from the back records of the police office. This record is now in the office of the commissioners, and is inaccessible. Hints and rumors relative to it say that some of the statements made against many of the 'honorably discharged' men are simply outrageous.

"Take Prather, for iustance—a young man of good physique and health, who is as vigorous in mind and body as any man of his age in the city. 'Bordering on imbeellity's said to be one of the false charges against him.

"Look at Luskey's case. He is charged by Dr. McKim with having the chronic rhenmatism, subject to heart disease, has the vertigo, liable to be attacked and suddenly die at any moment, and yet he is young, hearty, and vigorous, only 42 years of age, just about the same age as Maj. Dye was when he applied for his discharge from the army twelve years age, and a good deal more vigorous looking. It is true he has attacks of rheumatism. Why not? He had been a policeman eighteen years, exposed to all sorts of weather, and had faced death on more than one occasion while in the discharge of his duty.

"Here's a stary about Luskey and another duty.

"Here's a story about Luskey and another officer which shows something about inside influence at police headquarters. Luskey was detailed at the Columbia buildings, a was detailed at the Columbia buildings, a nice billet, where he would not be exposed to the weather. A United States senator brings influence enough to have a friend of his (a policeman) who has the asthma too bad for night duty, put in Luskey's place. The latter goes to regular duty again and gets the rheumatism and an 'honorable discharge,' while the man with the asthma remains on the force and the same influence that keeps him there puts his wife in a government office also.

"Take the case of Policeman Grant. He is honorably discharged for bad health upon the say so of a police surgeon, while another police say so of a police surgeon, while another police surgeon says there is not a healthier man on the force at present. Everybody knows about Phil. Thompson, who is blind. And so through the list it is contended that great in-justice has been done these men."

justice has been done these men."

"Why don't the commissioners do something for them?"

"The men are not able to get a hearing before Judge Edmonds, who appears to be running the machinery along with Maj. Dye, or at least they can get no satisfaction. Have you heard about the new appointment?"

"No. Who is it?"

"Its another was confederate officer although you heard about the new appointment?"

"No. Who is it?"

"Its another ex-confederate officer, although that wouldn't be anything against him if he was a citizen. Cox, the chief of detectives, was a citizen of Kentucky when appointed, where he has lived for many years. The new man who issaid to be in training for Capt. Vernon's place is Col. E. H. Cummins, who commanded a confederate battery of Maryliand artillerists during the war. He is not a stranger here, resides in Georgetown, and was highly recommended for 'inspector of police" by Gen. P. G. T. Besurggard, Gen. Joe Johnston, Gen. Longairect, Gen. Randall Gibson, and other distinguished confederate officers. Gen. Gibson speaks of Cummins as one of the 'bravest and gallant soldiers of the lost cause.' He was appointed two weeks ago as a private on the force, but the fact of his appointment has been kept dark, and not even entered on the record (which is open to public inspection) for fear the newspaper fellows would get it. Ho is now in the office with Maj. Dye, and just as soon as Capt. Vernon is reduced to the ranks or 'honorably discharged' Col. Cummins is to step in as captain and inspector."

"You appear to have everything down to a fine point relative to thesy matters," said the reporter.

"That's not all yet by a jug full," said the reporter.

"That's not all yet by a jug full," said the gentleman. "Wait a few days and I will give you a pointer about some of the newly appointed officers who have sworn falsely relative to their birth places and ages. In conclusion let me say that Dye, Cox, and Cummius are doing mighty well so far as getting local offices is concerned. Two of them at least were not citizens of the district in any sense when appointed.

were not citizens of the district in any sense when appointed.

"Don't you think, major, that there may have been some injustice done in the matter of the recent discharges?" asked a REPUBLICAN reporter of Maj. Dye yesterday.

"Possibly there may have been, but there was no intention of doing injustice to any one. The men were all examined by the physician and the board before I made any recommendations. I don't fatter to do injustice to a man, but in so many chees there may have been some one whose case was perhaps not fully considered."

"Will any of the discharged men be restored?"

"I have not considered that question yet."
"There has been a good deal of talk about the appointments of Messrs. Cox and Cummins. What were the considerations that inmins. What were the considerations that induced their appointments?"

"Well, as to Mr. Cox, I don't think his age is any bar to his efficiency. He has been employed on special work, and you know he is an intelligent, educated man, one whom I could send to a cabinet minister, if necessary, and feel that he would conduct himself as a and less that he would conduct himself as a gentleman. He is not employed as a police-man, and so has no claim to retention beyond the time when his services are valuable." "How about Cummins?" "I don't care to say anything about him

"Do you think the discharged men will test

the matter in the courts?"
"I don't know, but I think not."

Civil Service Commission Programme. The new civil service rules having been approved, the commissioners will leave Washington in a few days for the purpose of putting examining boards in operation in all the large cities. As the provisions of the civil service act relating to appointments take effect July 16, it is essential that examinations shall be held before that date. The commissioners expect to have their bureau in this city in working order about the first week in June, in this city in working order about the first week in June, and they propose to have the examining boards in the cities fully established in time to secure the examination of applicants for positions in the service some time before July 16. The work has been divided up to the positions in the service some time before July 16. The work has been divided up so that each commissioner is assigned to a district. Commissioner Eaton takes the principal eastern cities, such as New York, Philadelphia, and Boston. Commissioner Gregory is assigned to Chicago, Milwaukce, Buffalo, Detroit, Toledo, and other lake cities, and Commissioner Thoman to St. Louis, Cincinnati, Pittsburg, Kanass City, New Orleans, and other cities in the southwest.

Each commissioner will take with him an assistant detailed from one of the denartments him under arrest, in Washington. These assistants will be selected from among officials who have already served on examining boards in the departments here, and who are familiar with the work. The examining boards in the cities will be selected by the commission from persons in the service in those cities, and they will hold examinations not more than twice a year. a year.

BASE BALL BULLETIN.

The Waverlys Defeat the Nationals-Games in Baltimore and Elsewhere. The Nationals and Waverlys played the best game seen here this season on the Athletic grounds yesterday afternoon. The Waverlys, smarting under their former defeats, went out on the field intent upon retrieving their laurels. They went to the bat first and were retired in one, two, three order. This was not very encouraging, and when the Nationals went to the bat their first striker. Baker, got around to third on a wild throw of Yewell's over Noone's head and scored on a base hit by Gladmon. The crowd seemed disposed to guy the Waverlys for this beginning, but they were not dismayed. Barr pitched so magnificently that the red legs could not hit the sphere at all, and Gerard caught perfectly. The Nationals played in splendid form, and for seven innings the Waverlys failed to score, and the game stood 1 to 0. In the eighth inning, when Gerard and McCauley, were on the bases, McKee drove a three-bagger cut into the right and brought two runs home. The spectators yelled themselves hearse, and though the Nationals bravely endeavored to make things even in their halves of the eighth and ninth innings, Barr's delivery was too crooked, and the score at the finish remained 2 to 1. The Waverleys were naturally delighted with their victory. The following is the score: letic grounds yesterday afternoon. The lowing is the score: WAVERLY.

BALTIMORE, MD., May 8 .- The Athletics lefeated the Baltimores again this afternoon by 8 to 5. The Baltimores held the lead up to the sixth inning, when the visitors batted Gallagher out of position, making six hits and four runs. Two more runs were made by the visitors in the seventh.
